Is your idea of technology in the classroom using a DVD video rather than a VHS cassette? Is it PowerPoint presentations? What if you could use your smartphone in the classroom to learn the way you are used to taking in information? On February 4, 2015, in the Simonsen Performing Arts Center – Indoor Theater, Bakersfield College will explore the concept of technology integration in the classroom through a talk titled “The End of Wonder in the Age of Whatever.” The talk, presented by Kansas State University professor Michael Wesch, will focus on how to create a sense of wonder in the classroom by giving students the gift of big questions.
